AGENDA

1. Conduct a psychological interview with students living in TTJs

Introduction. Psychologist of Samarkand State University O. Eshmanov carried out individual preventive work with each student. In particular, individual psychological methods were obtained with students with disabilities. The problems that currently plague students were studied in detail and psychological counseling was provided.

Psychological counseling was also provided to help young people make independent conscious career choices and shape their personal career plans. Students were also informed about the history of the origin of psychology. In particular, as long as a person exists, he considers himself based on his life experience and has the ability to perceive this or that situation, to understand the world, to separate things and events.

The idea that man has something different from the physical body has existed since ancient times. As in ancient times, through the phenomenon of human dreaming, some people's unique abilities (e.g., success in hunting) sought to explain the causes of death and other events. But the initial views were of a mythological nature. They were acquired through blind faith, not through thinking. The spirit, the views in the back, were often associated with the breath, and the spirit was imagined as a flying creature.

Psychological explanations were conducted with Charos Tirkashova, Guluruh Khamidova, students of the Faculty of Chemistry, Feruza Khamraevs, students of the Faculty of Biology, Diyor Bakhtiyorov, Temur Khabibullaev, disabled people of the 2nd group, living in the dormitories number 4-5 of Samarkand State University.
