Does your university as a body deliver projects to record and/or preserve intangible cultural heritage such as local folklore, traditions, language, and knowledge? This can include the heritage of displaced communities.

Samarkand State University is engaged in teaching, education and training related folklore, old traditions, languages and knowledge. Many students are carrying out research on different noble personalities of Uzbekistan and Central Asia. On the other hand, Government is also focusing on work and life of national reputed figure like Alisher Navoi. There was a project which aims the purpose of this project is to prepare and print a collection of articles entitled "Stranger in a foreign land" and arrange delivery to places of enlightenment.
